ANTI-SOVIET POLICY OF ADMINISTRATION HAS LODGE BACKING

Present Règime Interlocked With Communist International, He Charges in Senate Speech

"No Time to Allow Agents to Kindle Flame of Riot and Disorder in America," He Says

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 7 (A)-The Administration's policy of nonrecognition of the present Soviet Government of Russia was supported vigorously today in the Senate by Henry Cabot Lodge, Senator from Massachusetts, the Republican leader, and chairman of the Foreign Relations

Quoting extensively from public rec-ords and documents to show the inter-locking of the Soviet Government and the Communist International the Communist International, Mr.
Lodge also brought additional evidence to the support of Mr. Hughes' contention that officials of the Soviet Government are a party through the Communist International to revolutionary propaganda in the United States, aimed at the overthrow of the American Government.

can Government.
"In my judgment," said Mr. Lodge, in summarizing his argument, "it is no time to give the Soviet Government of Russia the official recognition and approval of the United States, and invite official representatives to come among us and under the diplomatic shield seek to break up our own labor or-ganizations, attack American laws and American freedom and kindle the flame of riot and disorder throughout our country.

"'Obsta principlis' is an ancient and wise rule never more needed here than States may co-operate with other na-at this moment, when we are asked to tions, looking toward the prevention at this moment, when we are asked to give recognition, not to a people or a country, but to a government—an active and insidious enemy working under our flag against all the beliefs and institutions which Americans hold most precious."

Reading a carefully prepared address of upward of 30,000 words, Mr. Lodge amounced that his argument contained "no, secret or anonymous reports of any kind," and that he addressed himself solely to the proposition contained in the resolution of William E. Borah (R.), Senator from Idaho, that the Senate declare in favor of the recognition of the present of the recognition of the present approved by the United States Senate;

Evidence was presented to show that the same group of men, chief among them Lenine, Trotzky, Zinoviev, Buk-harin, Kalinin and Kamenev, control the Russian Government and play a predominating rôle in the congresses and conferences of the Communist In-

Aside from this interlocking, Mr. Lodge asserted that the interdependence of the Soviet Government and the munist International manifests itself in many other ways; that the proceedings of the Communist International, its proclamations and propa-ganda appear in the official organs of the Soviet Government; that the use of the Russian wireless and telegraph has been granted to the Communist International and that meetings of the congresses of the International and of the executive committee are held in governmental buildings.

Talks On International

Documentary evidence also was produced to show that the Communist International is the creation of the Russian Communist Party, which was declared to be the controlling force Control of the International has been retained by that party, Mr. Lodge said, through the support by the Soviet power of many of the so-called delegates and through the financial dependence of the International on the Soviet power inasmuch as it has no resources of its own.

Reviewing in detail the make-up of the various branches of the Russian Government, Mr. Lodge offered a table to show that the high officials of the Russian Communist Party, the Russian Soviet Republic, the federation of Soviet republics and the Communist International practically are one and the same. Here was declared to be presented "a system of interlocking directorates which would be accepted at once by any court or any jury in this country as demonstrated without

Nation Begins Voting on Peace Plan

WITH the publication of the Bok Peace Plan today in newspapers throughout the United States, begins the popular referendum which will give to citizens in every community an opportunity to vote on the proposal.

One of the most direct means of balloting will be through the press. Dally and weekly newspapers will print the ballot with the text or digest of the plan. The circulation of the dailies that will print the ballot with the plan totals 15,000,000. Editors of 7000 weekly papers, with a combined circulation of 7,000,000, have agreed to print the ballot, and thus carry the referendum into every rural community. Four hundred magazines, with a total circulation of about 5,000,000, will carry the ballot. In addition, thousands of men's civic, political, business and religious organizations, women's clubs, churches, hotels and fibraries will be operate. The Christian Science Monitor prints on page 4 the ballot, which may be filled out and sent to The American Peace Award, 342 Madison Avenue, New York. The ballot will appear in every issue this week.

Mr. Bok, in his foreword to the official statement of the Jury of Award, emphasizes these words of that body: "It is the unanimous hope of the jury that the first fruit of the mutual counsel and co-operation among the nations which will result from the adoption of the plan selected will be a general prohibition of the manufacture and sale of all materials of war." Briefly, the winning plan

I. That the United States shall im-mediately enter the Permanent Court of International Justice, under the conditions stated by Secretary Hughes and President Harding in February, 1983;

1923;
II. That without becoming a member of the League of Nations as at present constituted the United States shall offer to extend its present co-operation with the League and participate in the work of the League as a body of mutual counsel under conditions which

1. Substitute moral force and public opinion for the military and economic force originally implied in Articles X and XVI.

2. Safeguard the Monroe Doctrine.

3. Accept the fact that the United States will assume no obligations under the Treaty of Versallies except by Act of Congress.

4. Propose that membership in the League should be opened to all nations.

5. Provide for the continuing development of international law.

SURVEY OF ASIATICS IS PLANNED IN WEST TO FIX U.S. POLICY

Object Is to Insure National, Not State, Legislation Concerning Orientals

By a Staff Correspondent

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7-The first omprehensive survey of the Oriental situation ever attempted on the Pacific coast, entirely nonpolitical and non-denominational, is soon to be launched under the leadership of Dr. Robert E. Park, professor of sociology and racial specialist of the University of Chicago.

Chicago.

Dr. Park, as research director, will preside at the first conference of a coast-wide central executive committee in San Francisco Jan. 21 to detertee in San Francisco Jan. 21 to determine the scope and plans for starting the Asiatic survey embracing California, Oregon, Washington and British Columbia, and in co-operation with the Institute of Social and Religious Research, New York City. Both the Far East bureau of the State Department at Washington and the immigration bureau of the Labor Department have given unofficial approval.

These developments were detailed by J. Merle Davis of Palo Alto, Calif. executive secretary of the survey, in executive secretary of the survey, in an exclusive interview accorded a rep-resentative of The Christian Science Monitor. Mr. Davis lived in Tokyo for 17 years and understands the Oriental rom first-hand study.

Executive Committee to Meet

The San Francisco meeting will bring together the following regional representatives of the executive committee elected by councils in their respective states: Dr. Theodore H. Boggs, British Columbia; Dr. Robert D. McKenzie, Washington; Dr. Edward O. Sisson, Oregon; Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford Univer-sity, northern California; and a repsity, northern California; and a representative not yet named from Los Angeles-for southern California. Regional headquarters have been established in Vancouver, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles. If practicable similar investigations will be extended into Hawaii and northern Maxico, according to Mr. Pavis

Mexico, according to Mr. Davis.

Devoid of the spectacular, absolutely neutral with every-shade of opinion represented, the "surveyors" will seek the truth about every Oriental com-munity, suburban and urban, in every aspect of life, for a possible basis of national legislation to settle the ques-tion. Dr. Park is expected to prove psychological and economic factors.

The only possible pathway to international agreement with reference to these complicated and difficult factors," it points out, "is through mutual counsel and co-operation which the plan selected contemplates."

The jury, composed of Mr. Root as chairman, Maj.-Gen. James G. Harbord, Col. Edward M. House, Ellen Fitz Pendleton, Roscoe Pound. William Allen White and Brand Whitlock, was unasimous in its selection of No. 1469

Appearances indi-cate that Mr. Ventzelos is bent on keeping neutrality between the con-flicting parties, and to avoid influenc-ing the popular masses in favor of any one party.

He believes that unless 75, per cent of a majority is assured, no republic should be declared. Addressing a letter to the Liberals as the party pos-sessing a parliamentary majority, Mr. Venizelos urges them to hasten the consequently of a constitution governmission ended and resign both offices as Assembly President and deputy and

Mr. Venizelos declared that he is optimistic of the final issue, and says that external danger for Greece is that external danger for Greece is dispelled. While in Paris, the Serbian King assured him that Serbia did not contemplate any interference with Greek home affairs. He was very hopeful of getting the promised to induce England to do the same. At the dinner given by Colonel Gonatas, Mr. Venizelos praised the salutary work of the revolution, and said it had achieved a miracle in organizing an imposing army out of demoralized troops strong mough to curb Turkish arrogancy. Rome Seeks Amicable Solution of Problems Concerning Cyrenaica and Cession of Jubaland

British Withdrawal From Egypt Compels Italy to Deal Direct With Cairo Government

By Special Cable ROME, Jan. 7-One of the first results of the Franco-Czech alliance and France's policy in Central Europe and the Balkans is the sudden change in the relations of Italy and Great Britain. The traditional Anglo-Italian friendship which has remained un-altered ever since Italian unity was accomplished passed through a serious crisis during the Italo-Greek dispute. Benito Mussolini's defiance of the League of Nations rendered him mo. Leigue of Nations rendered him mo-mentarily unpopular in the eyes of the British public, but after Sir Eric Drummond's visit to Rome, when the future relations of Italy and the League were clearly defined, a change in Italo-British relations became manifest, with the result that it was possible to restart conversations between Italian and British statesmen in order to remove obstacles which stood in the way of a closer understanding.

Two main problems are now under discussion—the correction of the Egyptian frontier next to Cyrenaica and the cession of Jubaland to Italy. In both cases Italy's claims are based on Article 13 of the Pact of London and Article 118 of the Treaty of Versailles. When the British protectorate in Egypt came to an end Great Britain informed both the Italian and the Egyptian governments that any cor-rection of the frontiers of Egypt should be carried out by direct negotiations between Cairo and Rome. Egypt, however, not being a party to the treaties on which Italy bases its claim, does not recognize those treaties as binding. Italy is very anxious to settle the dispute with Egypt, especially because the rebels in Tripoli receive large consignments of arms from the Senussi refuge in Egypt, and it insists that Great Britain should be expected. press the Egyptian Government to hand over the zone in dispute.

King Fuad's Visit

Now that diplomatic relations have been normally established between Cairo and Rome, the task of reaching a friendly agreement is easier. King Fuad's projected visit to Rome will naturally help to overcome the present difficulties.

The Italian claim to Jubaland is a matter concerning only Great Britain, and it was believed a solution of the grant six months' time extension. It is believed a final decision will not be taken until the Lausanne and the settlement conditional many that a settlement conditional upon Italian evacuation of the Dodecanese. As things are today it is possible this difficulty will be overcome by postponing any decision as regards the Dodecanese until Italo-Greek relations improve.

many were in a sense prejudiced, and laws have been made on the basis of instinct, prejudice, group, party and religious interests. The Pacific Coast Oriental Survey will be no less American, but no more favorable to the Japanese, because of its scope, thoroughness and impartiality.

Some feel that a survey-is unnecessary, that all the facts are in and laws made or pending will give complete or adequate relief. But this attitude belies the history of race aggression. We should avoid legislating by states by adopting a national policy toward the Asiatics.

The survey has no intention of forming public opinion or in shaping legislation. Our one purpose is to create a fund of facts on all phases of the Asiatics in America, their interelation in white communities and their effect there, economic, social, industrial, moral, religious, political, civic, biologic. An array of indisputable facts garnered by research experts will command the confidence and interest of the whole country.

The survey will become the clearing house for theories and data where they may be segregated according to their accuracy. Dr. Park is reserving all staff appointments until he comes west, but he hopes to utilize the colleges and universities for special lines of technical research.

Blames, Communist Party

It furnishes, however, a convenient opportunity to say that things which are done and controlled by the other and dominant branches of the Government are not done by the Government of Russia. Everything that has been done by any one of the three branches of the Russian Government the Federation of Soviet Republics, the Russian Soviet Republic, and the Communist Party—has been done by the Government of Russia. There is no escaping that fact. no escaping that fact.

I think I have shown who the mentare who control all these organizations and who control Russia, and who are the real government of Russia. Their names are practically summarized in the political bureau of the Russian Communist Party. It is a very formidable and highly organized system of government—arbitrary, unscrupulous and efficient. Asserting that he could go on al-

As an example of the latter, he read from a letter written by Trotzky, "to an American Communist," Mackay, a Negro, which was published in the Moscow Izvests on Feb. 15, 1923. It

It urged greater activities among Communists in America in organizing the workers and combating "capitalist designs.

Louisiana League Directors Call on Members to Combat Drive for Shooting Preserve

Referring to the Louisiana Gulf Coast Club plan to establish a private shooting preserve between the Sage and Rockefeller sanctuaries as a scheme unfair to the Nation at large, as a violation of the "good faith of the State of Louisiana," and a "veritable slaughter pen of wild fowl," Louisiana sportsmen have been called upon by the board of directors of the Louisiana Sportsmen's League to combat the movement.

In this action, the league has joined in the nation-wide protest against the plan. Copies of its statement and the resolutions attached have been broadcast to organizations of sportsmen praised Mr. Fletcher and the and bird protectionists. The Massa-

bers, and only 20 per cent, or 400, avail themselves of the shooting avail themselves of the shooting, privileges in each season, and if these 400 members shoot an average of 10 days each during the 50-day meason, if each man "bagged" only 20 ducks a day (which is the average per day per man in the Little Lake Club and the Delta Duck Club) this would mean 100,000 ducks slaughtered by this club 100,000 ducks slaughtered by this clubeach season.

Aside from the selfish interest which the 1000 members of this league have in the conservation of wild fowl, we feel that we owe a duty to the sportsmen of this country, who too are seeking the same ends, to protest against this proposal and to combat it by all legitimate means.

The good faith of the State of Louisiana is pledged to the protection of these game refuges which, through the generosity of the trustees of the Rockefeller Foundation and Mrs. Sage, have been intrusted to the protection of this State.

tection of this State.
Louisiana cannot afford to be recreant to this trust.

The board of directors of the league, therefore, has resolved:

1. That the establishment of the Louisiana Gulf Coast Club, or any similar club with large membership, on lands immediately adjacent to the Rockefeller, Sage and State Game Refuges should not be permitted, and should be condemned by all sportsmen here and elsewhere having an interest in game conservation:

2. That the officers of this league be directed to use all legitimate means to present the establishment of said clubs in the immediate vicinity of these refugees:

3. That these resolutions be submitted to the individual members of this league for their approval or disapproval, and that publicity be given to the result of the referendum.

strongly recommended, and as a step in that direction the committee recommended, and the Legislature has since enacted, a statute which provides that, before a loan can be authorized for any of the first 14 items mentioned in Section 7. Chapter 44, General Laws, there must be provided from revenue, or from available funds, a sum equal to 25 cents on each $1000 of the assessed valuation of the preceding year.

This will automatically provide a small contribution from revenue toward permanent improvements, and if the results of this act are in any way similar to those of the act of 1923, which contained a similar provision relative to borrowing for departmental equipment, it is feit by authorities, that not only will the statutory requirements of a contribution of 25 cents of each $1000 of assessed valuation be compiled with, but in a very large number of cases the entire appropriation will be raised in the tax levy and a saving of interest charges made.

"Use the debts to break the deadlock," is the proposal of J. Henry Scattergood, a business man of Philadelphia and formerly member of the American Friends' Service Committee, who is in Boston to make a series of addresses on the European situation. "We delude ourselves if we believe Europe does not wish peace," he said today to a representative of The Christian Science Monitor. "But the present situation is a hopeless deadlock and will remain so until some outside help, such as the United States might prvide, enters to break it. The American debts provide a means to bring a scaling down of reparations to a possible figure, and with that accomplished other factors in the European crisis such as French security, could be considered with greater clearness."

Mr. Scattergood spoke this noon before the Methodist Ministers' Union and tonight he will address a dinner at Harvard University, at which the European Student Relief drive will be launched. Prior to his direction of the relief work of the Friends' Society, Mr. Scattergood was a member ciety, Mr. Scattergood was a member of the first commission of the Ameri-can Red Cross which was sent to France during the war. He was prominent among advocates of American leadership in European settlement at the Williamstown Institute of Politics last summer. He said this morning:

Three major problems confront Europe today. These are reparations, debts and disarmament: For the set-tlement of those problems American dots and disarmament. For the settlement of those problems American co-operation is necessary, and such co-operation. I believe, could be best assured at an international conference similar to the Washington Conference. But to make such a conference a success the United States must be prepared to give something, as it gave in the matter of naval disarmament. A conditional cancellation of the debts—conditional upon an allaround scaling down of debts and a general reduction of reparations—would serve that purpose.

As for French security, Mr. Scattergood is convinced that security must be provided, not alone to France, but to Germany and other Europeanstates as well. He declared:

states as well. He declared:

states as well. He declared:

The proposals of Lord Robert Cecil are the best that have been made. Lord Robert has proposed that the European nations most vitally concerned in the future of the Rhine form a mutual pact agreeing to stand together for the enforcement of a Rhineland Monroe Doctrine, and to repeal any aggression against the status there. This proposal does not involve the United States in any way, and it does point a possible way out. The banks of the Rhine should be neutralized and be under the jurisdiction of the League of Nations. With this accomplished, and with a pact of security signed by Great Britain, France, Germany, and Belgium, a new order would be established in Europe.

Fear is at the basis of much of the difficulty in Europe, according to Mr. Scattergood. He continued:

The French people are not out for war. They want peace. But fear drives them to support policies which they do not approve. There is only one nation which can remove that pall of fear, and that nation is the United States. We will fall miserably in our international obligations if we refuse to extend a helping hand in this hour.

Russian Players because then one "is there."

In "The Lower Depths" one suffers in the flowing action of that cellar; one laughs and plays amid grim unhappiness with true Russian naïveté; one weeps with Russian suddenness (although one's neighbors do not know it); one sympathizes with all the characters at once. Even the very evil ones are so pitiable. It is as purgative as Greek tragedy, for it quickens compassionate love of humanity and strengthens the desire to help.

There were some changes in the cast, that is, from the first supreme presentation the writer saw last spring, of this, the supreme-play of their repertory, and they proved disappointing. The Satine who was not Stanislavsky

"American Co-operation Necessary" to "Break Deadlock," Says J. Henry Scattergood

"Use the debts to break the deadlock," is the proposal of J. Henry Scattergood, a business man of Philadelphia and formerly member of the mocking, half-despairing, as the Baron, and the Baron, and the Baron, and the Baron, as the Bar of The Lower Depths, made of wigs and paint.

In all the diffused beauty of this play there was just one little wish—"If only one could understand Russian!"

A very large audience bade farewell to the Russian players in the evening, remaining in the places to recall them several times after the final curtain. The performance quite justified the entusiasm, "The Cherry Orchard" is the most comprehensible to non-Russians of the three Tchekhoff plays presented by the Moscow players in Boston, and brings out some of their most characteristic and effective work. All the laudatory things, said of the last year's production apply to Saturday night's presentation. It remains only to comment on some of the achievements which seeniel particularly impressive, this year.

Of these the first to come to mind is seemen particularly impressive. this year.

Of these the first to come to mind is the delightful capacity of the actors to give themselves without self-consciouaness to childlike play. All the cast displayed remarkable ability in this particular, but the most conspicuous instance was the teasing of Miss Tarasova, the Anya, by Mr. Stanislavsky, the Galeff, which seemed perfectly spontaneous.

A corollary of this playfulness was the sadden Russian descent from laughter to tears. With astonishing racial, abruptness these players turn from sorrow to joy and back again. From Mme. Tchekhova as Mme. Ranevskaya we could wish for more joy and fewer tears. After seeing her in a number of roles one becomes aware that her mannerisms persist, except in the part of Nastaya in "The Lower Depths." Her sighs, it must be confersed, become monotonous.

But from Mr. Stanislavsky we would ask no change of method. His grief on leaving his home was altogether con-vincing and made a fitting close for an vincing and made a fitting close for an engagement long to be remembered.

To meation only one more individual, there was illusion and infinite pathos in Mr. Luzhsky's faithful old manseswant, hobbling, mumbling, deserted at the

A single plan often represented the views of hundreds of thousands of individuals. There were also received several hundred thousand letters which, while they do not submit plans, suggest in almost each instance a solution of the peace problem.

The jury had, therefore, before it an index of the true feeling and judgment of hundreds of thousands of American citizens. The plans came from every group in American life. Some were obviously from lifelong students of history and international law. Some were from persons who had studied little, but who have themselves seen and felt the horrors of war or who are even now living out its tragedy.

However unlike, they almost all express or imply the same conviction: That this is the time for the nations of the earth to admit frankly that war is a crime and thus withdraw the legal and moral sanction too long permitted to the same method of settling international disputes. Thousands of plans show a deep aspiration to have the United States take the lead in a common agreement to brand war in very truth an "outlaw." The plans show a realisation, that no adequate defense against this situation has thus far been devised and that no international law has been developed to control it. They point out, that security of life and property is dependent upon the abolition of war and the cessation of the manufacture of munitions of war.

Some of the plans labor with the problem of changing the hearts of men and disposing them toward peace

Full Text of the Prize-Winning Bok Peace Plan

The complete manuscript of Plan No. 1469, providing for co-operation between the United States and other nations "to achieve and preserve the peace of the world," is given below, including the author's reasoning:

PLAN NO. 1469

There is Not Room for More Than One Organization to Promote International Cooperation

Five-sixths of all nations, including about four-fifths of markind, have already created a world-organization, the purpose of which is "to promote international co-operation and to achieve infernational peace and security."

Those nations cannot and will not abandon this system, which has now been actively operating for "3"/2 years. If leading members of the United States Government ever had serious hopes that another association of nations could be formed, such hopes were dispelled during the Washington Conference by plain intimations from other powers that there is not room for more than one organization like the League of Nations.

The states outside the organized world are not of such a character that the United States could hopefully co-operate with them for the purpose named. Therefore, the only possible path to co-operation in which the United States can take an increasing share is that which leads toward some form of agreement with the world as now organized, called the League of Nations. By sheer force of social international gravitation, such co-operation becomes inevitable.

The United States Has Already Gone Far in Co-operation With the League of Nations

The United States Government, theoretically maintaining a policy of isolation, has actually gone far, since March 4, 1921, toward "co-operation with other nations to achieve and preserve the peace of the world."

The most familiar part of the story is the work of the Washington Conference, wherein President Harding's Administration made a beginning of naval disarmament, opened to China a prospect of rehabilitation, and toward with Great Britain, Japan, and France to make the Pacific Ocean worthy of its name.

with Great Britain, Japan, and France to make the Pacific Ocean worthwor its name.

Later came the recommendation that the United States should adhere to the Permapent Court of International Justice.

Not long after that action President Harding wrote to Bishop Gallor:

"I do not believe any man can confront the responsibility of a President of the United States and yet adhere to the idea that it is possible for our country to maintain an attitude of isolation and aloofness in the world."

But since the proposed adhesion to the Permanent Court would bring this country into close contact at one time and point with the League of Nations, and since such action is strenuously opposed for exactly that reason, it is pertinent to inquire not only how much co-operation with the League and its organs has been proposed during the life of the present Administration, but also how much has been actually begun.

Officially or Unofficially the United States is Represented on Many League Commissions

The United States Government has accredited its representatives to sit as members "in an inomicial and consulting capacity" upon four of the most important social wifter commissions of the League, viz.: Health, Opium, Traffic in Women and Children, and Anthrax (Industrial Hygiene). Our Government is a full member of the International Hydrographic Bureau, an dean of the League. Our Government was represented by an "unofficial observer" in the Brussels Conference (Figance and Economic Commission) in 1920. It sent Hon. Stephen G. Porter and Bishop Brent to represent it at the meeting of the Opium Commission last May.

Our Public Health Service has taken part in the serological congresses of the Epidemics Commission and has helped in the experimental work for the standardization of serums.

the Epidemics Commission and has helped in the experimental work for the standardization of serums.

Our Government collaborates with the League Health Organization through the International Office of Public Health at Paris, and with the Agriculture Committee of the League Labor Organization through the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome.

In February, 1923, Secretary Hughes and President Harding formally recommended that the Senate approve our adhesion to the Permanent Court under four conditions or reservations, one of which was that the United States should officially participate in the election of judges by the Assembly and Council of the League, sitting as electoral colleges for that purpose. Unofficial co-operation from the United States with the work of the League includes membership in five of the social welfare commissions or committees of the League, in one on economic reconstruction, and in one (Aaland Islands) which averted a war. American women serve as expert assessors upon the Opium and Traffic in Women commissions.

Two philanthropic agencies in the United States have between them pledged more than $400,000 to support either the work of the Epidemics Commission more than $400,000 to support either the work of the Epidemics Commission or the League inquiry into conditions of the traffic in women and children. How Can Increasing Co-operation Between the United States and the

The United States being already so far committed to united counsels with League agencies for the common social welfare, all of which have some bearing upon the preservation of world peace, the question before us may take

How can increasing co-operation between the United States and the organized world for the promotion of peace and security be assured, in forms acceptable to the people of the United States and hopefully practicable?

The United States Can Extend Its Present Co-operation With the League's Social Welfare Activities

Social Welfare Activities

Without any change in its present policy, already described, the United States Government could, first, show its willingness to co-operate similarly with the other humane and reconstructive agencies of the League. To four of these agencies that Government had already sent delegates with advisory powers. It could as properly accept invitations to accredit members with like powers to each one of the other welfare commissions. It has already received invitations from two of the latter.

It is, secondly, immediately practicable to extend the same kind of cooperation, whenever asked to do it, so as to include participation in the work of the commissions and technical committees of the Labor Organization. The record shows that such co-operation is already begun.

The single common purpose of all these committees is the collection and study of information, on which may be based subsequent recommendations for national legislation.

All conventions and resolutions, recommended by the first three congresses of the International Labor Organization, have already been laid before the Senate of the United States and, without objection, referred to the appropriate committee. No different procedure would have been followed if the United States were a member of the Labor Organization of the League.

An Immediate Step. Is Adherence to the Permanent Court

An Immediate Step Is Adherence to the Permanent Court

A third immediately practicable step is the Senate's approval of the proposal that the United States adhere to the Permanent Court of International Justice for the reasons and under the conditions stated by Secretary Hughes and President Harding in February, 1923.

Hughes and President Harding in February, 1923.

These three suggestions for increasing co-operation with the family of nations are in harmony with policies already adopted by our Government, and in the last case with a policy so old and well recognized that it may now be called traditional.

They do not involve a question of membership in the League of Nations as now constituted, but it cannot be denied that they lead to the threshold of that question. Any further step toward co-operation must confront the problem of direct relations between the United States and the Assembly and Council of fifty-four nations in the League.

Fifty-seven states, including Germany, are members of the International Labor Organization of the League, "There are about 65 independent states in the world.

In Actual Operation the League Employs No Force

In Actual Operation the League Employs No Force

The practical experience of the League during its first 3½ years of life has not only wrought out, in a group of precedents, the beginnings of what might be called the constitutional law of the League, but it has also shifted the emphasis in activities of the League and foreshadowed important modifications in its constitution, the Covenant.

At its birth the Covenant of the League bore, vaguely in Article X and more clearly in Article XVI. the impression of a general agreement to enforce and coerce. Both of those articles suggest the action of a world-state which never existed and does not now exist. How far the present League is actually removed from functioning as such a state is sufficiently exhibited in its dealings with Lithuania and Poland over Vilna and their common boundary, and with Greece and Italy over Corfu.

Experience in the last three years has demonstrated probably insuperable difficulties in the way of fulfilling in all parts of the world the large promise of Article X in respect to either its letter or its spirit. No one now expects the League Council to try to summon armies and fleets, since it utterly falled to obtain even an international police force for the Vilna district.

Each Assembly of the League has witnessed vigorous efforts to interpret and modify Article X. In the Fourth Assembly an attempt to adopt an interpretation of that Article in essential agreement with the senatorial reservation on the same subject in 1920 was blocked only by a small group of weak states, like Persia and Panama, which evidently attributed to Article X. a protective power that it possesses only on paper.

Such states, in possible fear of unfriendly neighbors, must decide whether the preservation of a form of words in the Covenant is more vital to their peace and security, and to the peace and security of the world, than the presence of the United States at the council table of the family of nations.

As to Article XVI, the Council of the League created a Blockade Commission, which, worked for two years to determine how the "economic weapon" of the League could be efficiently used and uniformly applied. The Commission failed to discover any obligatory procedure that weaker powers would dare to accept. It was finally agreed that each state must decide for itself whether a breach of the Covenant has been committed.

The Second Assembly adopted a radically amended form of Article XVI, from which was removed all reference to the possibility of employing military force, and in which the abandonment of uniform obligation was directly provided for. The British Government has since proposed to weaken the form of requirement still further.

Articles X and XVI, in their original forms, have, therefore, been practically condemined by the principal organs of the League, and are today reduced to something like innocuous desuetude. The only kind of compulsion which nations can freely engage to apply to each other in the name of peace is that which arises from conference, from moral judgment, from full publicity, and from the power of public opinion.

The Leadership of the United States in the New World Is Obviously that which arises from conference, from moral judgment, from full publicity, and from the power of public opinion.

The Leadership of the United States in the New World Is Obviously Recognized by the League

Another significant development in the constitutional practice of the League is the unwillingness of the League Council to intervene in any American controversy, even though all states in the New World except three are members of the League.

This refusal became evident in the Panama-Costa Rica dispute in, 1921 and in the quarrel between Chile, Peru and Bolivia, a quarrel which impelled the last two states to absent themselves from the Third Assembly, wherein a Chilean was chosen to preside.

Obviously the League intends to recognize the leadership of the United States in the New World precisely as the United States claims it. This is nothing less than the observance of an unwritten law limiting the powers and duties of the League Council, defined in Article XI of the Covenant, to questions that seem to threaten the peace of the Old World. When the United States is willing to bring the two halves of the world together for friendly consideration of common dangers, duties and needs, it will be possible to secure, if it is desiged, closer co-operation between the League organizations and the Pan-American Union, already a potential regional league. It is conceivable that the family of nations may eventually clearly define certain powers and duties of relatively local significance which may be developed upon local associations or unions. But the world of business and finance is already unified. The worlds of scientific knowledge and humane effort are nearly so. Isolation of any kind is increasingly impossible, and world organization, already centralized, is no more likely to return to disconnected effort than the United States is likely to revert to the Calhoun theory of States Rights and Secession.

In Actual Operation, if Not in Original Conception the League Realizes the Principle and the Hopes of the Hague Conferences

The operation of the League has therefore evolved a Council widely dif-ferent from the body imagined by the makers of the Covenant. It can employ no force but that of persuasion and moral influence. Its only actual powers are to confer and advise, to create commissions, to exercise inquisitive, con-ciliative and arbitral functions, and to help elect judges of the Permanent Court.

In other words, the force of circumstances is gradually moving the League into position upon the foundations so well laid by the world's leaders between 1899 and 1907 in the great international councils of that period. The assemblies of the League and the congresses of the international labor organizations are successors to the Hague conferences.

The Permanent Court has at least begun to realize the highest hope and purpose of the Second Hague Conference.

The Secretariat and the Labor Office have become Continuation Committees for the administrative work of the organized world, such as the Hague Conference lacked resources to create but would have rejoiced to see.

The Council, resolving loose and large theories into cleancut and modest practice, has been gradually reconciling the League, as an organized world, with the ideals of international interdependence, temporarily obscured since 1914 by the shadows of the Great War.

with the ideals of international interdependence, temporarily obscured since 1914 by the shadows of the Great War.

No one can deny that the organs of the League have brought to the service of the forces behind those ideals an efficiency, scope and variety of appeal that in 1914 would have seemed incredible.

It is common knowledge that public opinion and official policy in the United States have for a long time, without distinction of party, been favorable to international conferences for the common welfare, and to the establishment of concillative, arbitral and judicial means for settling international disputes. There is no reason to believe that the judgment and policy have been changed. Along these same lines the League is now plainly crystallizing, as has been shown, and at the touch of the United States the process can be expedited.

In no other way can the organised world, from which the United States cannot be economically and spiritually separated, belt the power of public opinion to the new machinery, devised for the pacific settlement of controversies between nations and standing always ready for use.

The United States Should Participate in the League's Work Under Stated Conditions

The United States Government should be authorized to propose co-operation with the League and participation in the work of its Assembly and Council under the following conditions and reservations:

I. The United States accepts the League of Nations as an instrument of mutual counsel, but it will assume no obligation to interfere with political questions of policy or internal administration of any foreign state.

The United States Will Maintain the Monroe Doctrine

In uniting its efforts with those of other states for the preservation of peace and the promotion of the common welfare, the United States does not abandon its traditional attitude concerning American independence of the Old World, and does not consent to submit its long-established policy concerning questions regarded by it as purely American to the recommendation or decision of other powers. The United States Proposes that Moral Judgment and Public Opinion Be Substituted for Force

Substituted for Force

II. The United States will assume no obligations under Article X. in Ats present form in the Covenant, unless in any particular case Congress has authorized such action.

The United States will assume no obligations under Article XVI, in its present form in the Covenant or in its amended form as now proposed, unless in any particular case Congress has authorized auch action.

The United States proposes that Articles X and XVI be either dropped altogether or so amended and changed as to eliminate any suggestion of a general agreement to use coercion for obtaining conformity to the pledges of the Covenant. The United States Will Assume No Obligations Under the Versaliles Treaty Except as Congress Approves

III. The United States will accept no responsibility and assume no obligation in connection with any duties imposed upon the League by the peace treaties, unless in any particular case Congress has authorized such action. The United States Proposes That Membership Be Opened to Any Self-Governing State

IV. The United States proposes that Article I of the Covenant be construed and applied, or, if necessary, redrafted, so that admission to the League shall be assured by any self-governing state that wishes to join and that receives the favorable vote of two-thirds of the Assembly. The Continuing Development of International Law Mast Be Provided For V. As & further condition of its participation in the work and counsels of the League, the United States asks that the Assembly and Council consent—or obtain authority—to begin collaboration for the revision and development of international law, employing for this purpose the aid of a commission of jurists. This commission would be directed to formulate anew existing rules of the law of nations, to reconcile divergent opinions, to consider points hitherto inadequately provided for but vital to the maintenance of international justice, and in general to define the social rights and duties of states. The recommendations of the commission would be presented from time to time, in proper form for consideration, to the Assembly as to a recommending if not a law-making body.

Among these conditions Nos. I and II have already been discussed. No. III is a logical consequence of the refusal of the United States Senate to ratify the Treaty of Versailles, and of the settled policy of the United States which is characterized in the first reservation. Concerning Nos. IV and V this may be said:

Anything less than a world-conference, especially when great powers are excluded, must incur, in proportion to the exclusions, the suspicion of being an alliance, rather than a family of nations. The United States can render service in emphasizing this lesson, leagned in the Hague Conference, and in thus helping to reconstitute the family of nations as it really is. Such a conference or assembly must obviously bear the chief responsibility for the development of new parts of the law of nations, devised to fit changed and changing conditions, to extend the sway of justice, and to help in preserving peace and security. The Continuing Development of International Law Must Be Provided For

It was a rehearsal for the Pi Eta annual show at Harvard to be given this evening for the first time pub-licly. An orchestra strummed and beat its way hesitatingly toward something like unity. A dozen in-tense young men ranged about like wolves seizing on defects in stage setting or lighting or clothes. EDUCATIONAL

The Women of China Emerging From High Walls of Their Homes

THE deep underlying interest of all my Oriental wanderings was to study the conditions of woman. Having seen what spectacular changes had developed in Egypt and Turkey and the Near East generally, I was curious to discover just how much the yeast of individualism had worked in the Far East. In China especially I sought to know how far woman had emerged from the high walls of her home. I found that her emancipation had progressed beyond examples and pioneers and was distributed so widely that she could be classified into groups, as she can be in America or Europe.

Foreign education and commercial-Their outlook is broad and they are as she can be in America or Europe.

Foreign education and commercialism are responsible for this. It is the day of opportunity for the many. Chinese history gives isolated examples of remarkable women; women who wrote, or painted, or governed, from Yang Kuei-fei who played upon the lute (ch'in) or the Emperor's heart, with equal delicacy and dexterity, to the "Old Buddha," who played upon the destinies of men and painted pictures at her summer palace while her Empire crumbled away. But a Mrs. Hslung Hsi-ling, or a But a Mrs. Hsiung Hsi-ling, or a Princess Roun-ling Dan, a Mrs. Folk (Lin Fung Yee) or Mrs. Nelson H. Y. (Lin Fung Yee) or Mrs. Nelson H. Y. Chen, a Dr. Mary Stone or a Dr. Yamei Kin, could be products only of Occidental ideas grafted upon an Oriental stock, and, though rare in themselves, are also representative of several classes now developing in Peach Blos-

Her necklace of gems gently clanks as it falls upon rich brocades, stiff with embroidery. Soft music of bells and reeds filter through the caressing air to the women of Old China. But I shall seek to reveal the new woman of the Republic, the Modern Plum Blossom of China evolving into the teacher, the phil-

Educators Most Quickening

Or all the women now engaged in professional work in China, the educators are among the most quickening. We have seen how the Chinese woman is emerging through education and training from the household prisoner and even sleve to the recipil prisoner, and even slave, to the social and economic independent. She soon prisoner, and even slave, to the social and economic independent. She soon will be rivaling the erstwhile maiden aunt of the Western world, who is making anywhere from $1500 to $25. 000 a year and not darning anybody's stockings—not even her own.

By becoming teachers and educators and entering the business field they sought to quicken the dulled mind and show the way to independence; while through social service, organized charity and philanthropy they have helped to arouse the downtrodden spirit to a realization of the happier conditions of a new age. To generalize upon such widely divergent cities as Peking, in the north, Shanghai in the middle, and Canton in the south is not like stating conditions in Boston, Philadelphia and Jacksonville, but rather like discussditions in Boston, Philadelphia and Jacksonville, but rather like discussing Montreal, New York and Mexico City, the self-interest is as complete and the intellectual distances between the malmost as wide. Ancestor worship has made the family, and nothe State, all important, and the lack of rapid, interprovincial communication, either physical or mental—there are few railroads or telegraph lines—has created a local isolation undis Tribution to the forward-looking interests of the community are effective and far-reaching.

Suddenly, as she stood waiting for the last delinquent to stop buzzing to has created a local isolation undisturbed by anything that the mysterious "grapevine telegraph" has not deemed important.

Therefore, when one can find similar conditions in these three great Chinese cities it is fair to assume that the development is national.

It has been stated that about one tenth of China is Christianized. I can-not vouch for the truth of this, but from personal observation, I would place the number of Christians among the new women at nearly 60 per cent, while among the professions alone it is possibly even higher.

Among the educators, Mrs. Folk

Among the educators, Mrs. Folk. (Lin Fung Yee), who has developed the Chu Chup Sum School for Girls at Canton is one of the most progressive. The McTyeire School in Shanghai perhaps has the most active agent. in developing modern ideas among the upper-class young womanhood, al-though the Keen Memorial School for Girls at Tientsin is another center of the "New Learning." It is just outside the South Gate of Tientsin within 20 minutes' ricksha ride of both the To minutes ricksha ride of both the Foreign Concessions and of the Chinese City and is a part of the Methodist Mission. As it is fairly typical a few words about it may be of interest.

Typical

The curriculum of the Keen School carries through the lower and upper primary and the middle school, four carries through the lower and upper primary and the middle school, four years each. About 200 girls attended during 1922-23. Its sessions last from the middle of September for nine months with occasional holiday. It costs about $75 gold per year to place a girl in this boarding school. The clothing and equipment may cost $50 more. Although some of the merchant class are very wealthy, money is scarce in the majority of homes, but it would seem as though the privilege of education for the daughters should be within the reach of the many.

Among the rules and regulations of the Keen School are some which indicate social customs differing from the Western ones, such as early and involuntary marriage. Two rules are:

In Peking I met an interesting group of young women, alert and capable teachers of the new generation. The Misses Dan-Ying Hsuh, Tao' Ling and Ruth Yong were three of them. Their outlook is broad and they are eager to help toward better times for women and for their country generally.

A fourth impressed me especially.

A fourth impressed me especially, Miss Edith Pang (Pang Yun H'slang) a clean-cut, brilliant, efficient product of education. Miss Pang is Dean of the Mary Porter Gamewell School in Peking, where she studied before go-ing to the Union Woman's College and preparatory to attending the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, O., where she received her B. dealing with various ideals of happiness the writer says:

The whole life of a Chinese woman is indeed wasted in a pitiful way. Herearly years of merry chasing at the heels of her parents, her middle years of housekeeping under the rule of her husband, and her latter years of religious worship at the feet of Buddha, represent all the activities of her entire life. Is this not pitiful?

Now is the time to call the attention of Chinese women to, the gloomy and unwholesome aspects of their social life. They should immediately be brought to the full realization that they constitute a nucleus of society, and that as such they should fully co-operate and insist on their right of co-operation with men for the advancement of the general social welfare. It is only through a diffusion of new learning and new knowledge, accompanied by an elevation of their thoughts and the enlightenment of their views on life, that they can be awakened to the fullest sense of their responsibility.

To Reduce Number of School Holidays

N CALLING upon cities and towns In CALLING upon cities and towns to reduce the number of school holidays each year, the New Hampshire Board of Education takes a step that is calculated to eliminate a source of much educational waste. While there is likely to be objection in many quarters to the suggestion that the schools should be kept open on such days as Memorial Day and Washington's Birthday, when patriotic exercises could take the place of the routine work, the general purpose routine work, the general purpose enunciated by the state board will be widely approved, especially in view of the statement that in some districts as many as 37 half days a year are lost to the pupils. In 15 districts the average time lost is 30 or more half days, in 96 districts the loss is between two and three weeks, and in seven other districts the loss is only from six to nine half days.

from six to nine half days.

Many of New Hampshire's "noschool" days are caused by bad weather. Therefore, it is recommended that the calendar for school terms be so arranged as to avoid the weeks when the most severe weather is expected, and when transportation is often impossible. A model sched-ule, which has been prepared, gives a series of short vacations, with the school weeks containing but three of the nine holidays usually observed. The chief advantage of this plan is not that it saves four or five days for ing the game, took their places readily and such a drill of the day's new nouns took place as left both quintet.

or five interrupted weeks.

After all, the full consequences of a school holiday are not felt until the day after. Monday is notoriously the hardest day in the week for teachers, who often speak of the day following an irregular "no-school" day as a fellowing the second of the day following the second of the day after the second of the day following the day after To be sure, the drill had taken 20. an irregular "no-school" day as a douinstead of the usual 10 minutes, but ble Monday. The week in which a so wide awake had the class become holiday occurs is so badly broken as to make consistent and continuous instruction virtually an impossibility

School visiting, hitherto haphazard plished in the remaining 20 minutes and consequently not always conwelfare, is to be avatematized in New York. At present each teacher is allowed three days a year to visit other schools. Under the proposed arrangement there is a possibility that the time allotted to all teachers in a certain department may be totaled and, if the occasion arises, given to one teacher, who will thus be enabled to devote herself steadily and effi-ciently to the investigation of a subject in which presumably the whole department is interested.

Leaders among the manufacturers here propose a national movement in the shoe industry for a trade adjust-ment that shall end present methods of cancellation of orders and return

As illustrative of the methods, local anufacturers declare that this class of buyers base their excuses for the return of orders on such claims as late shipment if the shoes are received but a day beyond the contract time; that the shoes are not up to sample, which the manufacturers say is an easy thing to claim; that shoes do not wear, even when the shoes are of such a grade that the manufacturer cannot give such a guarantee, and that they are of inferior workmanship and poor material when such claims are not

That some concerted action may be the result of the agitation here is not a remote possibility. It is a phase of the shoe industry about which the gen-eral public knows little and which would not be permitted in some other lines of commercial activity. Not all of the concerns in this city have gone out of business because of labor troubles alone, but some of the most reputable houses with excellent organizations have retired from the field

DRYS NOT UPSET BY COOLIDGE BILL

Only Dragging Red Herring Over Trail, Says Mr. Davis

The proposed bill provides the same fines and penalties for violation of the dry law as it does for violation of the law granting suffrage to colored voters.

"It is surprising to find Mr. Coolidge, an out-and-out wet, favoring enforcement of the dry law in any circumstances," said Mr. Davis, "He is obviously seeking to link up the hostility felt in some parts of the country to one provision of the Constitution with the liquor interests' hostility to the closing of saloons. Such efforts to amalgamate opposition from many amalgamate opposition from many quarters against the dry law, and to confuse the issue, have been frequent in the past. BELFAST, Ireland, Jan. 5-Major O'Neill, Speaker of the Ulster Parlia-ment, told a meeting here yesterday that if a Labor Government in Great Pritain should introduce a capital Jevy the six northern counties of Ireland would not be affected, inasmuch as by the Act of 1920 no new form of taxa-tion can be applied without the con-sent of the Ulster Parliament.

Moreover, he said, the Ulster Gov-ernment had specifically prohibited the making of a levy on capital. He predicted that in view of this position many English business houses would transfer their offices to Belfast.

If the empty cars the company is hauling ever fill up, it will be largely, I believe, owing to her. An obscure artist, perhaps, now, Mme. Gentner-Fischer, with her strong, lifelike portrayals, will come out, I trust, into the light. With her vocal warmth, vigor and sincerity, she may be the force—and I hope she will be—that will make this transient troupe per-

Numerous comments I could make on what the Germans have done and how they have done it. But besides what I have said, I could scarcely do more than repeat in regard to their two productions, "Der Evangelimann" (alght of Jan. 1), and "Die Toten Augen" (night of Jan. 3), what a reviewer for The Christian Science Monitor has lately said of them in Chicago; while I could do no more in regard to "Tristan and Isolde" (night of Jan. 2), "Walktire" (afternoon of Jan. 3) "Lohengrin" (night of Jan. 4), and "Flying Dutchman" (afternoon of Jan. 5) than note that the model of the same tempo adopted again in the canon played by the woodwind or brass instruments between symphony without increasing the woodwind or brass instruments beyond the number of players prescribed in the score. There was an element of the academic, the traditional, in the Beethoven, which the conductor undoubtedly would direct with a certain abandon at home.

The "Mastersinger" Prelude was opened by Mr. Ganz with a solemn breadth, not to say slowness of tempo, as one hears it occasionally from the pit in German opera houses. This proved pleasing, but the same tempo adopted again in the canon played by the woodwind instruments Augen" (night of Jan. 3), what a reviewer for The Christian Science Monitor has lately said of them in Chicago; while I could do no more in regard to "Tristan and Isolde" (night of Jan. 2), "Walkdre" (afternoon of Jan. 3) "Lohengrin" (night of Jan. 4), and "Flying Dutchman" (afternoon of Jan. 5) than note that they presented them with all the enthusiasm and authenticity that could be desired. Mr. Lattermann, baritone, I consider to have offered a remarkably good example of characterition of Henry Hadley, on the evening of Jan. 5. The work, without any question, possesses an energy and a vitality that suits its title. It sounded to me especially well scored in the Rothwell. to me especially well scored in the departments of the strings and the brasses, where the ideas of action and Pablo Casals Soloist mastery seemed to be expressed. It sounded less strong in the woodwind department, where reverie and meditation seemed to prevail. The com-poser, I should say, is more given to thinking in terms of broad harmonies and general sonorities than in those of solo melody. His idiom is his own and is of today, though it is in no way fantastically individual or modern. The mood of his work is cheerful, the structure clear. "Youth" should stand a good chance of gaining a plac in the orchestral repertory and holding it.

Helfetz-Casals-Hofmann

Three musicians of high renown I have had the privilege of hearing: Jascha Heifetz, violinist, in Carnegie Hall, with Isidor Achron as accompanist, on the afternoon of Jan. 1; Pabso Casals, violoncellist, at the Town Hall, with Edouard Gendron as accompanist, this afternoon, and Josef Hofmann, pianist, at Carnegie Hall, this afternoon. If anybody should declare to me that these three are the first men of the day at their respective instruments I should make no attempt to dispute the contention. Mr. Heifetz long ago proved himself the perfect mechanician; and he was held by some persons more in awe, I fancy, than in esteem on that account. But he has lately grown into some-Three musicians of high renown l fancy, than in esteem on that account. But he has lately grown into something more than an executant. He used to stand afar from his listeners as a virtuoso and astonish them. He can now approach them as a human being and express their emotions. Accordingly, his playing of the Rondo Capriccioso, by Saint-Saëns, and of the air on the G string, by Beach, on this occasion disclosed to me technical brilliance that I could momentarily marvel at, and mature sentiment bepriliance that I could momentarily marvel at, and mature sentiment besides that I can long ponder upon. Strange, though, I can make almost the same observations of Casals and Hofmann that I can of Heifetz. Only a few years ago I thought more of

His phrasing is well rounded out, though his beat may be seemingly brief, his gestures laconic in a measure. Ganz may have restricted himself for the sake of clarity, in the original of Cervantes and in view of his abort acquaintance with in view of his short acquaintance with the ensemble. There always prevailed graceful poise which made for good blending, although the performance as a whole suffered from lack of nuance. Interpretatively Conductor Gans may

Murray Warner collection of Oriental art was given to the University of Oregon in the spring of 1922, the argument offered by its donor, Mrs. Warner, being as follows:
"Where we have a common ground with people any differences can be cleared away, and mutual understanding reached. We cannot hate or fear those whom we understand and appreciate; where there is no fear there can be no hate and where there is no can be no hate and where there is no hate there can be no war. Hate and fear are the direct results of ignorance. When ignorance is eliminated by the right education, then and then only comes the understanding that prevents war. If the people of the United States can learn to understand the best in Oriental character as well as the Orient is learning to appreciate the best in ours, then there will be no war nor any fear of one."

Two Divisions

The Murray Warner collection is divided into two major parts: Japanese and Chinese. Every object under these classifications has been selected to illustrate the customs, costumes and manners of a people, their literature, philosophy, religion, arts and crafts. A library supplements these works of art, and in it the student at the University or the visitor to the museum may trace the history of either country or any matter related to the Orient, or connected with the Statistics show that in the thought of American school children as well as in that of many of their elders, the yellow man ranks with the savages of central Africa. No clear idea of the central Africa. No clear idea of the civilization of the East seems to have reached popular fancy. Indeed it was not so long ago that certain important documents intended by Washington for the Government at Peking were bound in red plush and sent out to China, the belief being that red plush would please the barbarian. In Peking the same documents were received with politely hidden scorn because the Chinese officials believed that only barbarians could have sent a diplomatic paper in such a binding. So it is evident that there is a need for our people to know more of the lands that border the other side of the Pacific, and it was to supply this need that border the other side of the Facility, and it was to supply this need that this Oriental museum was founded. How a work of art may reflect a philosophy, an economic attitude, a social condition or a manner of thought is best illustrated in the 19 paintings recently added to the Chinese group in the Warner Museum through the generosity of the Swedish collector, General Munthe of Peking. Among these beautiful old paintings is one picturing a tree-surrounded house in the middle distance toward nouse in the middle distance toward which a cavalcade is riding. Berlin's National Gallery has passed its collection of drawings and its modernist masters to its "dependence," the quondam palace of the crown prince on the Unter den Linden. By modernist is meant the naturalistic-impressionist school and what has come in its wake. The masters of the school specified are probably the most important of the whole century and in so far the National Gallery has suffered a loss. But its gain has been, that it now has become in a way a collection of historical art and consequently the new arrange-ment of the museum may be looked upon as destined to remain for a good long time. It is based on the lessons taught by the great centenary exhibi-tion, held at the same place in the

As mentioned above, when the col-lection was moved into the present building in 1855, this was discovered to be too small from the very out-set. Since then new accommodations were found, by removing the collection of casts, originally exhibited on the ground floor, and by encroaching within the adjacent park for the nineteenth-twentieth century pictures. The foundations and the cellars were finished, when the war broke out and all work on it had to be stopped. If ever, it will not be completed before many

AUCKLAND, New Zealand, Dec. 8
(Special Correspondence)—Attention is again directed to the difficulties of New Zealand in the mandated territory of Samoa. The Administrator. Major-General Richardson, has come to Auckland on a flying visit, and the Minister for External Affairs has taveled from Wellington to confer with him on Samoan problems.

The New Zealand Herald finds in the explanation that Sir Francis Bell, who is Acting Prime Minister, gives for this meeting, "a definite admission of perplexity, even a suggestion of embarrassment, regarding the financial obligations of the Samoan mandate." General Richardson, who rose from the ranks in the army, is a man of unusual tact and sympathy.

CALCUTTA DEBATES | SPAIN GOOD MARKET HOUSING PROBLEM FOR ITALIAN WARES

Much Enhanced by Lack of Good Transportation

CALCUTTA, Dec. 5 (Special Correspondence)-Few cities in the Empire have more serious housing and communication problems to meet than Calcutta. Here there has been all the acute shortage in dwelling places that has prevailed in London during and since the war, coupled with extremely defective communications. Last April the Bengal Government appointed a strong committee to investigate these twin problems, the official communique observing that "Calcutta still remains in the position she occupied in 1920, a modern city hedged in by railways and canals, and surrounded by insanitary and unde-veloped suburbs, which are associ-ated with their center merely by con-tiguity or concentricity, and not linked therewith by adequate radial roads.

Rent control (to meet the profiteering which undoubtedly took place ing which undoubtedly took place owing to the failure of supply to meet demand) in the circumstances which exist can be justified as a temporary expedient, but has the demerit of producing an artificial adjustment, and thus a false security which must divert attention from the bolder remedies which the situation demands.

The committee have at length reported. They resommend the forma-ported. They recommend the forma-tion of a development board for the dual purpose of developing building land on a large scale in the suburbs, and of co-ordinating measures for the improvement of the city as a whole. The committee consider that there is room for improvement in the railway service linking up with the suburbs. Here they are confronted with the difficulty of access from the central parts of the city to the terminal stations, and recommend the construction of an overhead railway. They also favor the speedy extension of the tramway system in Southeast Calcutta, but, in view of past experience, are skeptical as to motor bus services proving effective. The neglect of bridges, in particular in the north and northeastern parts of the city, is un-favorably commented on.

On the all-important question of housing, the committee note that the high cost of land is considered to be the chief factor in the cost of accommodation. Owners are reluctant to sell. The committee advise powers being taken under the Land Acquisition Act for the compulsory acquisition of land, the effect of which would be to offer security of title, lack of which is at present a deterrent factor in the promotion of building enterprise.

The committee contend that both for Europeans and Indians the scale of building is unduly extravagant. They

The chief measures discussed were the control of the exchange market in France by a mixed committee of bank-France by a mixed committee of bank-ers and public officials, prevention of the sale of francs for speculative pur-poses, and the restriction of advances by the banks to those exporters sus-pected of leaving abroad, at least tem-porarily, part of the payments re-ceived for their exportations.

Seriousness of Dwelling Shortage New Trade Agreement Will Furnish Fillip to Industry of Both Italy and Spain

ROME, Dec. 23 (Special Correspondence)—The treaty of commerce between Spain and Italy, signed at Madrid shortly before the Spanish royal visit to Italy, is perhaps the most important trade agreement concluded by Italy in 1923. It secures valuable advantages to certain leading Italian exports which will henceforth enjoy the most-favored-nation treatment in Spain. Spain.

the most-favored-nation treatment in Spain.

Spain will furnish Italy essential raw materials such as coal and metal ores, while Italy, pending the projected expansion of Spanish industry, will find in Spain important outlets for Italian industry, more especially such branches of it as were created by the war and suffered afterwards from a lack of suitable foreign outlets. The Italian motor, airplane, gunmaking and naval construction works will stand to benefit.

The most important feature of the treaty is undoubtedly the special clause which pledges the two governments to appoint, within a period of six months, a board of experts to study means whereby they may adopt a policy of economic co-operation in those markets in which their characteristic products have hitherto been competitors and in some of which they have a practical monopoly so far as Europe, is concerned, for example, wines, citrus fruits, olive oil, olives, almonds and similar products. Italian and Spanish olive oils compete in the North American market their granes amonds and similar products. Italian and Spanish olive oils compete in the North American market, their grapes and oranges in the Baltic and Great Britain. The experts will have to determine "zones of sale" according to the importance of the market and the the importance of the market and the number of Italians and Spaniards living in the purchasing nations.

The treaty provides also for special rebates of more than 20 per cent, below the customs' tariffs for certain articles. This is particularly remarkable because of the many reproaches which the head of the Spanish Directory made to his predecessors for having made similar rebates in treaty negotiations. A few weeks' government experience have probably taughthim that treaties cannot be concluded him that treaties cannot be concluded without give and take. Spain being particularly weak on the manufacturing side, and having little export in the way of manufactured goods, Italy will probably be the chief gainer by any increase in the traffic.

It has been proposed to improve sea communications between the two peninsulas and to create new tele-graphic facilities. In order to in-crease traffic between Genoa and Barcelona fares and tariffs will be Europeans and Indians the scale of building is unduly extravagant. They urge a better system of building facilities, such as the encouragement of leasehold, the improvement of property mortgages as security, and the establishment of a property exchange with the development of co-operative building societies.

FRENCH FINANCIERS

DISCUSS INFLATION

Barcelona fares and tariffs will be greatly reduced.

In view of the treaty of commerce just signed, it is of some interest to note the importance of the Spanish market to Italian exports to Spain amounted to 18,110,000 lire; in 1922 the figure stood at 141,891,000 lire. The fact that Spanish exports to Italy consist mainly of raw materials (wool, hides, lead, copper, scrap metal, rosin, smoked and preserved fish), whereas about 80 per cent of Italian exports about 80 per cent of Italian exports to Spain is accounted for by manu-factured goods, makes this market of special interest to Italian industry.

ECONOMIC CONDITIONS IN SUMATRA IMPROVE

THE HAGUE; Dec. 23 (Special Correspondence)-The economic conditions on the east coast of Sumatra are again normal, although trade is not what it used to be. The total export trade during the third quarter of 1923 was 16 per cent larger than in the ceived for their exportations.

The enactment of severer criminal laws against speculation and exchange was also considered. A high official of the Bank of France said this morning that the present crisis was temporary and that it was due in the beginning to an offensive in London against the franc, later encouraged by a German group of banks and industrialists.

The object of the alleged Anglo-Cerman offensive against the franc, in the opinion of this official, is to drive France to inflation with the hope that French diplomacy, confronted by a financial collapse, will show itself more accommodating.

PROVINCE OF ANSERT OF ANSERT OF THE PROVINCE OF ANSERT OF TIMESTORY AND THE PROVINCE OF ANSERT OF TIMESTORY AND TIMESTOR oils amounted, in the first nine months of 1923 to 215,000 tons (199,000 tons in 1922), of which gasoline accounted for no less than 155,000 tons (103,000 in 1922). The number of business failures during the first three quarters of 1923 did not exceed 77, as comters of 1923 did not exceed 77, as com-pared with 208 for the whole of 1922,

An effort was also made to induce the Banque Provinciale to enter, but without result. The position of the new institution will be much strengthened through the proposal of the Quebec Government to lend the new bank $15,000,000 through an issue of 5 per cent bonds redeemable within 40 years. A bill to this effect will soon be submitted to the Legislature, and its passage is assured.

This latest merger reduces the number of chartered banks in Canada to 14, but no concern is evinced on this account. There is a general realization that the position of the remaining banks is much strengthened, and it is generally recognized that it is much bet-

LONDON, Jan. 7—The stock markets today were irregular. All domestic issues were in supply, holders wishing to be out of British securities before the resumption of Parliament session. Gilt-edged issues were dull, holding around the low levels.

Olls showed strength in spots, the improvement being due to the decline in production figures. The industrial list held quiet and leaderless. Home rails were weak on the possibility of strikes. South American rails were unsettled.

There was a good demand for Kaffirs on better monthly returns. French loans railed in sympathy with francs. Rio Tintos sold at 29%, Rand Mines at 5½.

PRICES MOVING HIGHER IN THE STEEL INDUSTRY

Pig Iron Buying by Speculators -More Furnaces in Blast

NEW YORK, Jan. 7 (Special)—Some elements of strength revealed themselves in the first week of the year in the steel industry. Pig fron at Chicago was advanced by some makers by 50 cents a ton to a minimum price of $22.50 for prompt delivery and $24 for more distant delivery.

Bastern makers of bolts, nuts and rivers have advanced prices to original Bestern makers of boits, nuts and rivets have advanced prices to original price levels after concessions made a few weeks ago. There has been a temporary reaction, however, in iron and steel scrap in some centers, where prices have yielded 50 cents a ton.

Another indication of the strength of the position of steel has been the marked interest in pig iron buying for speculation. About 10 days ago New York bankers inquired for 10,000 tons of iron and more recently 50,000 tons of iron has been bought by middlemen in the middle west to hold for expected higher prices. The speculators evidently reckon on the expected coal strike on April 1 to advance the prices of coke and therefore in turn to send iron higher. It has been a long time since iron was bought for other than actual consumption.

Foreign Steel

Though foreign steel has been offered considerably under the American market to points along the Atlantic seaboard, American consumers so far have preferred to pay the higher prices of domestic mills.

Foreign steel is apt to be delayed in arrival; redress in case of defects is difficult when the maker is abroad, and sizes and shapes do not always conform to American standards. British structurals have been offered at 2.10c, Atlantic seaboard, duty paid, and French structurals at 195c.

A ship and car builder along the Atlantic coast, who previously inquired for 2700 tons of car plates and gave out the impression that he would buy foreign material, finally placed the business with an American mill.

It is learned that the railroads consumed 27 per cent of the Nation's steel output in 1923, as compared with 25 per cent in 1922; the automobile makers used 11 per cent, compared with 15 per cent in 1922; the automobile makers used 11 per cent, compared with 10 per cent in 1922; the automobile makers used 11 per cent, compared with 10 per cent was consumed last year, compared with 10 per cent in 1922; for handling natural resources (oil, gas, water and ores) 10 % per cent was consumed last year, compared with 10 per cent in 1922; accounted for 6 per cent, compared with 10 per cent the previous year; exports accounted for 6 per cent, compared with 10 per cent in 1922; agriculture took 4 per cent both years.

Though the percentages consumed in the various industrial lines did not differ much in the two years, the actual tonnage did, as the total steel last year was 31,600,000 tons, compared with 1975 was considerably greater than the previous year.

1923 was considerably greater than the previous year.

Thus the output of rolled steel last year was 31,600,000 tons, compared with 25,550,000 tons the year before. Accordingly railroad consumption was 66 per cent more last year than during 1922; automobiles took 50 per cent more steel than in 1922; metal containers required 20 per cent more.

More Active Furnaces

For the first tinge in seven months there was a net gain in active blast furnaces in December, though the gain was only one with 232 furnaces in blast at the beginning of January. The December output was 2,920,928 tons, or 94,-225 tons daily. Total production of pig iron and ferroalloys for the year was 40,250,000 tons, which is a record for all time.

40,250,000 tons, which is a record for an time.

Coke production in 1923 was the largest since 1918, totaling 13,114,340 tons, valued at $77.874,606, the latter having been exceeded by only three years. The average price for the year was $5.90 per net ton Connelisville. Production was about 131 per cent over that of 1922. Incidentally, the present price of tooke is below the average for last year, furnace coke selling at $3.75 to $4 a ton and foundry coke at $5 to $5.50.

$5.50. Many trade observers see a parallel in conditions at present in the steel trade, and that just a year ago. Buying was on the increase, though normally this is the slack season of the year; then, however, much purchasing was done for speculation, as prices were obviously tending higher; today the buying is only to cover actual and prompt needs. The situation as it is today is much the situation as it is today is much the better one.

Not much large tonnage business is before the trade at present. However, the New York Central is inquiring for 10,000 cars, and also for about 12,000 tons of steel. The Pennsylvania is asking for a round tonnage of track accessories for use in the spring when it lays news rails. The Chilean State Railways have divided an order for 15,000 tons of rails between an American and Belgian mill. Though awards of structural steel for the last week reported totaled 25,000 tons, new inquiries were only 15,000 tons.

The passing of 12-Hour. Day

The passing of 12-Hour. Day

The passing of 12-Hour day in the steel industry. Probably the case of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation is typical of the industry as a whole. President Eugene G. Grace states that no more than 2 per cent of the entire force works over 10 hours a day. Tenhour shifts may be in vogue for several years yet. For instance in the case of open hearth furnaces, it is practical to work two shifts of 10 hours each and devote the remaining four of the 20 hours to repairs. In blast furnaces and rolling mills, however, it is practical to work in eight-hour relays.

Lead has been the most conspicuous of the nonferrous metals during the week. The leading refiner made two advances during that period, one of $2 a ton and the other of $5, the price at the close of the week being 7% cents a pound, New York. Prices in the outside market were $ to $% cents, Kast St. Louis. The makers of cables and mixed market were 8 to $% cents, New York and 7% cents to $ cents, East St. Louis. The makers of cables and mixed market were 6 to $1.60 per share, payable Feb. 15 to stock by one-third the pre-war normal, hence the bulk of Mexican lead will go to Europe for some time to come and will not compete seriously with American lead here.

Total production of refined lead from domastic ores last year was $5,000 nours to repairs. In blast furnaces and rolling mills, however, it is practical to work in eight-hour relays.

Coupon and registered bonds interchangeable.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK, NEW YORK, TRUSTEE

· Subject to the Approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The Company agrees to pay interest without deduction for Federal Income Taxes not exceeding 2% per annum, and agrees, upon application within sixty days after payment, to reimburse holders resident in Pennsylvania for the four mills tax assessed in that State.

Mr. E. E. Loomis, President of the Company, has summarized as follows his letter to us describing these bonds:

Lehigh Valley Harbor Terminal Railway Company owns approximately 535 acres of land fronting on New York Harbor in the Greenville section of Jersey City, and has constructed thereon the first unit of a new water and rail terminal, known as Claremont Terminal. Adjoining the first unit the Company owns locations for two additional piers which will be constructed as increased traffic warrants. From the standpoint of navigation, the site located directly upon New navigation, the site, located directly upon New York Bay and easily accessible from New York, Brooklyn, Newark, Bayonne and other points, is especially advantageous.

The first unit of the Terminal has been completed and consists of a pier more than two-thirds of a mile long, with a 35-foot depth of water along-side. Its facilities include a large steel and concrete warehouse, an open dock served by a travel-ling crane, and an ore dock together with the necessary railroad tracks and equipment. When the three units have been completed, the Terminal will afford docking facilities of approximately 51/2 miles, accommodating more than thirty ships of the largest size now afloat.

The railway and other property of the Company will be leased to and operated by the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, which also owns all of the capital stock of the Terminal Company, and which will unconditionally guarantee these bonds by endorsement both as to principal and interest.

These bonds will be secured by direct first mortgage on all the properties now owned or hereafter acquired by the Company, for or in connection with the new Terminal. The assessed value of the Company's real estate, together with the cost of improvements already made, is largely in excess of this issue of bonds, the Company's only funded

These $10,000,000 bonds will be used to pay part of the indebtedness incurred by the Company prior to June 30, 1923, in connection with the acquisition of the property and improvements thereon. These bonds are part of an authorized issue of not to exceed $30,000,000 at any one time outstanding.

These bonds, in the opinion of counsel, are a legal investment for savings banks in the State of New Jersey and for Insurance Companies in the States of New York and New Jersey.

These bonds are offered subject to sale and when, as and if issued and received by us and subject to the required approval of Governmental authorities and of our counsel, Messrs. Morgan, Lewis and Bockius, Philadelphia, and Messrs. White and Case, New York.

Application will be made to list these bonds on the New York Stock Enchange

We recommend these bonds for investment

BANK HAS TWO BILLION ASSETS

BILLION ASSETS

LONDON, Jan. 7—The Midland Bank by purchase of North of Scotland Bank will have 2200 branches, or 156 more than its previous unique record. Its deposits will increase £ 20,500,000, bringing the total to the world's record, £ 256,943,000. Its assets will be £ 429,-6 6 82,000, and will make the Midland the first £ 2,000,000,000 private bank in history.

The purchase, which must be ratified by the Scottlah Bank shareholders, is for each £ 16 share, on which only £ 4 has been paid up. The Midland Bank will issue 448,250 new shares if all the Scottlah shareholders make the exchange, but needs to create no new capital, as 524,733 fully paid shares remain from the last issue of 2,000,000 when the Clyderdale Bank, also in Scotland, was bought.

HAVE NEW PRESIDENT

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7—Although details have not been given out, the Bank of Italy is known to be considering an important officers' stock ownership plan, not dissimilar from that put into effect by the General Motors to presidents, under the stock-ownership plan, on the directorate.

A. P. Glannini will retire from the presidents, under the stock-ownership plan, on the directorate.

A. J. Mount, vice-president, who was taken from the Central National Bank of Oakland three years ago to manage the Bank of Italy is branches in the East San Francisco Bay cities, is to be transferred to the headquarters office.

BRITISH COTTON WAGES
LONDON, Jan. 7—Under the new trade agreement. British cotton employers would be at liberty on Jan. 25 to claim a reduction in wages of 500 operatives. It is believed unlikely, however, that such action will be taken, as the average earnings of workers are now low. Operatives cannot claim wage changes until Sept. 25.

The visitors tailled in the third and scored three times and the locals added one just before the final bell.

The score of 6 to 0 at the end of the second period gives a fairly accurate indication of the score and it would have been larger had not Roach performed in his usual brilliant style in the Toronto nets. The local attackers were able to penetrate the visiting defense many times, but Roach constantly outguessed them and turned aside the shots from close range. The summary: OTTAWA

Basketball, 23 to 21

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Jan. 7 (Special)—Indiana University's basketball team lost to University's basketball team lost to University of Wisconsin in the first Conference game of the season. Saturday night, by the close score of 21 to 23, at Bloomington. The first half began with a rush by both sides, and they kept up the same pace during the length of the half. Both teams showed a good defense, although the Hoosiers allowed a Wisconsin man to slip through occasionally for a goal. M. J. Nyikos '24 started early in the game to make unsuccessful attempts at the long shots, which marked his playing in this game. Occasionally he would score a basket, but not so often as in his usual habit.

Wisconsin substituted B. P. Barwig '25 for F. V. Varney '25 during the first half and he made a spectacular dribble down the length of the floor and scored a basket at the end. The first half ended 10 to 6 in favor of Wisconsin. During the intermisaion sweaters were presented to 15 football players and their senior manager.

The second half was much like the first except Indiana could not score as consistently as could Wisconsin. At one time the score was 16 to 3 in favor of Wisconsin and by a desperate spurt, which included two brilliant shots from the middle of the floor by Nyikos, each marking up two on Indiana's score, the score was tied at 19-all. However, Wisconsin were not wisconsin. In Logan wisconsin.

Edmonton 4 2 4 10

The approach of the halfway mark in the Western Canada Hockey Association season finds Saskatoon with a lead of one game over Calgary, its nearest rival. But this lead only stands on paper, for Saskatoon has played 14 games to Calgary's 9. Calgary thus has a far better average than any other team in the league and is generally picked by coast managers for the Prairie championship. Edmonton continues the weak link in the prairie chain. After a brief recovery early last week it was beaten by Calgary. Friday, Edmonton will come to the coast for a tour of the coast cities, this week, opening in Vancouver, tonight, and playing in Seattle, Wednesday, and here, Friday.

Harvard University, whose Class A team drew a bye Saturday, continues to lead the first and second division in the championship interclub race of the Massachusetts Squash Racquets Association, as a result of competition over the week-end, after a lapse of two weeks. Lincoln's Inn Society follows, but had it won all five matches instead of three, its team would still docupy second place in Class A. Lincoln's Inn played Saturday without the services of some of its leading players, and lost two matches to the Union Boat Club team. Boaton Athletic Association made a clean sweep against the Harvard Club, displacing the U. B. C. team for fifth position in the standing. Majcolm Bradlee was the only Tennis and Racquet Club to lose against Newton Center Squash Tennis Club.

In Class B. Tennis and Racquet and Harvard University teams won five matches each against Newton. Center Squash Tennis Club and Neighborhood Club, respectively. Tennis and Racquet occupys second place while the Union Boat Club is only 1 point behind for third. Boston Athletic Association dropped one match to Lincoln's Inn Society, as did Harvard Club against the Harvard Freshmen.

Milton Club is still leading the third division standing with 18 victories and 2 losses. Bos fon A. A. has gone into a three-cornered tie for fifth place with Newton Club and Newton Center Squash Tennis Club. Neighborhood goes farther into the cellar by losing all five matches Saturday to Harvard Club.

Completely Baffles Illinois Basketball Men-Score, 36 to 20

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 7 (Special)—Uncovering a startling versatility of play, the reorganized University of Minnesota basketball team sprang a great surprise and completely bassed their University of Illinois opponents here Saturday night. With the Illini leading in the second period and 14 minutes left to play the Gophers attacked for an avalanche of baskets, scoring 21 points in rapid succession, enough to smother their rivals under a 36-to-20 score at the sinal gun.

Minnesota maintained a slight lead during the last half of the first period which ended 11 to 9 and then both teams broke forth with good display of basket shooting, the visitors assuming the lead through some beautiful throwing by L. M. T. Stillwell '24 aided by a floor goal by W. N. Roettger '24. Except for this brief spurt Illinois seemed uncertain and bewildered. Throughout the contest their defensive work appeared particularly off its last season form.

The Gophers were on the offensive through three-fourths of the contest. They displayed superior teamwork and shrewdness asserted itself. C. P. Pessek's brilliant playing at center for Minnesota was the individual feature; he scored 5 field goals and 2 free throws for 12 points, one-third of the team total. He was closely followed by R. A. Ekhund '25, with 10 points. The team showed strength in all branches of play, its spares accrediting themselves well.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Jan. 7.—United States Military Academy hockey team was defeated Saturday, 7 to 3, by the skaters of the Royal Bank of Canada, of New Tork City. The Cadets were outclassed by the visitors, who displayed much better all-round form. W. L. Marlnell scored the Army goals, but the second period was almost ended before the Cadets got one past Robertson for a counter. O. McPherson was the high scorer and a speedy skater for the visitors.

These reflections perhaps suggest the two best arguments for reading, on the one hand, new books and, on the other, old books. Haslitt said, very finely, "I do not understand all this talk about new books. Any book that I haven't read is a new book for me." But it would be a mistake to take his remark too seriously as a reason for not reading current literature. The main value of current literature is that it furnishes a reflection of the times we live in—their faults as well as their virtues; their practice as well as their ideals; and the main value of reading classic literature is that it furnishes a reflection of the mind of the race in its noblest malifestations. Goethe's great saying that "the real reason for reading old books These reflections perhaps suggest 'the real reason for reading old b is that they help us to understand the present," might be interpreted as meaning that classic literature offers meaning that classic literature offers a standard of nobility or wisdom or beauty, in short, of idealism, which we may apply to the works of the present. Old history, religious and secular, is the only valid gauge we have for estimating the direction and importance of current waters. importance of current events, as every one knows; but it is equally true that old fiction, poetry, drama, essays, and letters, which Bacon described as a kind of "feigned history," are even clearer reflections of former times, perhaps because the reflection is often unintentional or even uncon-

"First the blade, then the ear, then the full grain in the ear",

BOSTON, MONDAY, JANUARY 7, 1924

EDITORIALS

In expressing general approval of the plan for insuring world-wide peace, which has won the Bok Award, and which is printed elsewhere

The Bok Peace Plan and which is printed elsewhere in the columns of the Monitor today, we do not acclaim it as the best plan that could possibly have been put forward. It is the primary fault- of the present effort of the committee in charge of the Bok Award that, in asking a general referendum as to the merits of the plan upon which they had determined, they have offered ho opportunity for voters to express their opinion as to an alternative proposition. It is quite true that the voter who is disinclined to give complete adhesion to the official plan is invited to write alternative suggestions on the ballot, but that is a difficult and involved method of expressing an opinion and, furthermore, does not afford opportunity for general concentration upon one proposition. Had the awards committee offered a choice between two suggestions, the result of the voting would have been more illuminating. Had the proposition, for example, which the Monitor set forth at considerable length some time ago, namely, that there should be equal conscription of wealth with conscription of man-power, and that service in essential industries should be compulsory equally with military service in time of war, been submitted, we think the interest in the balloting would have been greatly enhanced.

At the time the Monitor set forth the project, which to it seemed most promising as a check to the war fever, it promised that should the Bok plan seem a feasible one the support of this paper would be given to it. We believe that the plan is feasible, provided it can be made to run the gauntlet of factional political antagonisms in Congress. Its weakness is not in its fundamental characteristics, but rather in the fact that it immediately encounters an organized hostile public sentiment. The concessions that have been made in the way of reservations to the proposed accession of the United States to the League of Nations are sufficient to meet just and intelligent criticism, but not sufficient to disarm prejudice when, that prejudice is backed by a desire to maintain a stubborn position in order to attain factional political ends. It is, therefore, not surprising that the committee is forced to admit that as yet no measure has been prepared for submission to Congress seeking to give effect to the Bok plan. Nor has any senator or representative expressed a desire to further that project. As a contrast to this may be pointed out the fact that the Monitor plan, in substance, has already been presented to the House by two representatives, and to the Senate by two senators.

We believe that the addendum offered by Secretary Root to the formal plan, having for its purpose the prohibition of the manufacture of arms and munitions, is of importance entirely commensurate with that of the plan itself. To make it workable, international action is, of course, necessary, and probably that international action could only conveniently be secured through the agency of the League of Nations. In a sense, therefore, the Root proposal must depend for its acceptance upon American participation in, or at least acceptance of, the machinery of the League. It furnishes rather an inducement for the United States to participate in this great international organization than an alternative to such a proposition. How great, however, is its necessity, and how far-reaching would be its influence for peace could not be better judged than today, when not only in Europe, but in South America, the business agents of the manufacturers of munitions are a very present and a very active force for the creation of international antagonisms and the aggravation of international jealousy.

The progress of the voting on the Bok Peace Plan will be interesting, but the significance of the result will hardly be greater than the effect already produced by the proffer of such a proposition. As distinguished a group of American citizens as could possibly be selected has agreed that the greatest hope of international peace is to be found in entrance upon the Permanent Court of Justice, and accession to the League of Nations with certain reservations. The policy committee, which presents the plan to the Nation, is made up of twelve members, the great majority of whom are active Republicans. and to that extent, presumably at least, doubtful of the League of Nations, which had its chief champion in a former Democratic President. The Jury of Awards, which selected the plan, is made up of seven Americans of high standing, under the chairmanship of Mr. Elihu Root, only two of whom can fairly be looked upon as thick-and-thin original advocates of the League. As it is only proper to ascribe to these gentlemen and ladies entire freedom from partisan bias in their selection and advocacy of a plan, so it is fair to point out that nothing in the personnel of the committee justifies the slightest suspicion that it was "packed." Whatever the outcome of the voting may be-and presumably there can be but one issue—the presentation of this plan to the American people affords another illustration of the vitality, permanence and force of the conviction that the United States must take its part in the regulation of the affairs of the world through the means of a strong international ofganization of states.

THE fact that there should be between twenty and thirty countries represented in the student body of Boston University speaks well for the cosmopolitan nature of the attraction exercised by this institution. That, moreover, religion holds as much interest for the students there as does business, as figures show, indicates strongly that the finer things of life are not entirely losing their hold on the coming generation, as some would have it appear. After all, the appeal of what is seen as Truth is far stronger upon the consciousness of the majority of the world's inhabitants than many are willing to

Since the war France has recorded receipts and expenditures in two different ledgers. First of all, there is the one containing the normal is the one containing the normal budget, which has swelled from about 5,000,000,000 francs for years immediately preceding the war, to roughly 23,500,000,000, about half of which goes to pay interest on the public debt. By means of taxes and other normal sources of income and, until last year, by means of loans, this budget has been balanced. For 1924, as reported to the Senate by Henry Berenger, the receipts have been estimated at 23,950,000,000 francs and the outlay at 568,000,000 francs less, a very good showing.

But this does not tell the whole story. There is another budget in which actual expenditures are balanced against something indefinite—that is the German obligation to pay reparations under the Versailles Treaty. It is called the "Budget of Recoverable Expenses," and covers amounts spent on pensions and the restoration of the northern provinces that were invaded. By the end of the year, Count de Lasteyrie has just told the French Senate, his country will have spent on this score no less than the huge sum of 118,000,000,000 francs.

Furthermore, neither of these budgets includes payments on the debts to the United States and Great Britain, called allied loans. The interest is accumulating and being added to the principal. Under certain conditions the British have offered to write off their claim against reparations payable by Germany, but no such offer has been made by the United States, and if there should be a new government in Great Britain, a new policy may be adopted. The money has been spent, and as it had been subscribed by private investors, it has to be paid back by somebody. Germany will be able to pay something, but how much? That is the enigma behind the French financial situation.

In the meantime the inflated state of the French franc will continue. Count de Lasteyrie has just obtained permission from the Senate to refund the Bank of France only 800,000 francs, instead of the anticipated 2,000,-000,000 for the current year, a considerable difference, and as the bank had issued paper money against the advances to the State, it is evident that there will be no serious reduction. In view of the steadily increasing cost of living, that is, the reduced purchasing power of the franc-the index for some French cities runs as high as 300, as compared with 100 early in 1914-the opponents of the Government will probably make political use of this situation in the coming campaign. Inflation, it should also be noted, aids temporarily the expansion of industries, while it hurts those living on fixed incomes. In exchange value the French franc continues to fall, a very disturbing sign. Instead of being worth less than five francs in the early months of the war, the dollar is now quoted at almost twenty francs. No wonder that some French senators, in criticizing the reduced repayments to the Bank of France, noted a connection between them and the fall of the franc. Under such circumstances living costs are sure to continue to rise, and the repercussions in the next election are inevitable. The proposed measure to curb profiteering does not strike at the root of the trouble. Neither does the official argument that the franc is brought down by speculators seem con-vincing. It is a question of confidence, and that cannot be restored by the methods hitherto followed. The last election was won on the promise to make Germany pay. Whether that will succeed again is not so certain.

Such brief inscriptions as have thus far been recorded by business and industry in the United States on Business Prospects for 1924 the clean page of 1924 have been indecisive and inconclusive ones. Securities and commodities, extremely dull and irregular, have thus far displayed no decisive trend. The exchanges, in particular the franc and sterling, have worked sharply lower. Currency inflation in France and the shadow of a Labor Cabinet in England are cited as the definite factors in these declines. The fact that the markets as a whole have suddenly, with the turn of the year, lost the buoyancy and zest which characterized their movements in the last month of the old year is quite widely construed by students of economic developments as a natural sequence in a case wherein they have run almost exactly parallel with current conditions, instead of, as usually happens, far ahead of current conditions. In other words, the markets are pausing, quite logically, in what may be termed a trading area, until some of the optimistic predictions for 1924 have developed, until the inventorytaking period is over and until more complete returns as to their forward business are received from basic industries.

But so far as business and industry are concerned and entirely irrespective of the immediate trend of fluctuations in securities and commodities—the outstanding facts are that the underpinnings are very sound and the room for expansion in all lines, as demand warrants, is limitless. Present indications, measured by the yardstick of 1923, as well as by the forward business already on the books in basic industries, point to the possibility that consumption in all lines will be unusually heavy in the new year. One of the reasons, of course, is that there exists practically no unemployment, and that wages, in almost every line, show practically no change from a year ago. In many lines, the 1924 program has been outlined on an enlarged pattern. Even in those lines in which overproduction brought price irregularity last year-of which cases the oil industry is the shining example-consumption is overtaking production so rapidly that production, even thus early in the year, is being speeded up.

In the main, however, there has been no overproduction, and with a few exceptions, producers in all basic lines are more nearly "caught up" with the outgo than they were at this time last year. The tremendous holiday trade was one of the factors in sweeping shelves bare. The most important, however, was the slow and tempered pace of industry in the summer, a condition imposed by months of "hand-to-mouth" buying. The effects of this 1923 curtailment in operations most likely will be reflected in a gradual speeding up. particularly in the case of manufactured goods, as the demands of buyers wax more insistent. The situation lies in the hands of buyers. It is a "buyers' market." If they have retained over the year-end the enthusiasm of November and December, or if they harkback to this time in 1923, such slack as now is apparent will be quickly taken up.

Business starts the first quarter of the new year with the solid foundation of a sound and undepreciated currency, a splendid banking situation, the likelihood of a general downward revision in tax schedules, the possibility of a near-by compromise of the reparations problem, and with a sufficient backlog of actual demand for goods and services of all sorts to sustain a ratio of operations in all lines entirely comparable with that established in the first quarter of the old year.

WE ARE so used to hearing of the pulling down done in the wrong way, that there is all the greater pleasure in hearing occasionally of the building up done in the right way. A few years since, the name of Ypres was in everybody's mouth, but lately so little has been said of it that the surprise now is to learn that there this good work of building up in the right way has been steadily going on, until photographs taken in 1923, giving general views of the town, are, except in certain main features, very like those made in 1912, and the horrible signs of war have all but disappeared.

Restoration
Should Be

As

The Journal of the Royal Institute of British Architects published in its number for Dec. 8 a most interesting account of the rebuilding of the town. In many countries people are apt to look on indifferently while, in peace time, beautiful and famous old landmarks are deliberately sacrificed to what we call progress. But the Belgians have a proper pride of place, a respect for history, and an appreciation of beauty inherited from the past. If, at first, the inclination in some quarters was to hold Ypres in ruins as a grim witness to the horrors of war, affection for the old town quickly overcame this sense of things and almost at once the work of restoration began. And it began and has been carried on, as all restoration should be, by reproducing as far as possible the original plan of the town and the original architecture of the buildings. .

But there are two notable exceptions in the rule for this restoration. The wonderful old Cloth Hall, the pride not only of Ypres but of all Belgium, is still in ruins, and some suggest that it at least should be so preserved, a reproach to the Germans and, most important, as eloquent an argument for peace as could be presented. Probably when feeling is less bitter and when the more essential rebuilding is finished, its turn will come. But though the old design can be scrupulously followed, nothing save time can restore the color and tone with which long centuries had enriched it.

The other exception is that, in replacing the old homes of the workmen, more attention has been paid to comfort and hygiene than to making an exact copy of the old. Even the garden cities of other lands have served as models. No doubt this is an improvement, but it means necessarily loss of character, and we see so much of the beauty and character of the past vanishing that, no matter if it vanishes in a good cause which we approve, we cannot watch it go without a pang. Still, restoration, both in Belgium and France, is so faithful to the past when possible and desirable that generous Americans who want to help may be content to give the money and let the Belgians and French do the rest.

Editorial Notes

While one "health" authority in Iowa is credited with the statement that the new physical education law, passed by the Fortieth General Assembly of that State, is the most important piece of health and school legislation ever enacted, it is just to urge that others, equally competent to judge, hold an exactly opposite view. Anyhow, the law, which will go into effect in September, 1924, will require that physical education shall be made a part of the curriculum of all public and elementary schools, while so-called health education is to be made, it is said, one of the five major subjects running through the entire curriculum. The great trouble with such legislation, as a general rule, is that when an inch is given an ell is taken.

It would seem that the authorities of the London Zoological Society are making the best of a bad job in instituting a thorough cleaning and redecorating of the parrot house. This building has not been one of those of which the society has been proud, but lack of funds makes the erection of a new house impossible for some time to come. Indeed, it has never been worthy of the yaried collection of birds on exhibition, but the plan to enamel the walls up to a level above the cages a deep black, with the upper parts in white, to reflect as much light as possible, should do more to show up the wonderful plumage of many of the birds than is the case at present.

That the total number of miles of federal-aid highways in the United States, completed at the close of the fiscal year which ended June 30, equals approximately the circumference of the globe, while the miles actually completed within the year in question correspond to the diameter, constitutes an interesting coincidence. Somehow such a description is easier to grasp than the actual figures—about 25,000 and 8000. Such figures, however, carry a wonderful promise of future achievement.

The Problem of Poland

London, Dec. 22 (Special Correspondence)—No one can deny that Poland constitutes one of the most important and critical of Europe's problems. Given a fourth lease of life by the Treaty of Versailles, in order to gratify the demand of the Poles for independence, and to create a buffer state between Germany and Russia, it remains for history to show whether the new state will prove a buttress of peace or an agent provocateur of war.

In this connection Count Skrzynski has written a book ("Poland and Peace," by Count Alexander Skrzynski; London: George Allen & Unwin. Six shillings net) which no student of European politics can afford to ignore. Let it be said at once that his work is no mere piece of propaganda. In so far as he has set out to defend his country against a prevalent charge of militarism, we readily forgive him, because the defense is moderately, ably and logically conducted, and cannot fail to carry a large measure of conviction. His point is that Poland, surrounded by potentially powerful enemies, dare not be militaristic; but that, on the contrary, she is obliged to maintain a large standing army (which swallows up half her financial resources) in order to safeguard her independence and protect western Europe against Bolshevist Russia.

Whatever may be our views on Russia, we can, at least, admit the menace to Poland herself. The Poles are in the position of having almost completely achieved their national ambition; but it is one of the tragedies of the new Europe that the achievement has brought them into prospective conflict with all their neighbors. From Germany they have taken 30 per cent of her agricultural area and 66 per cent of the most valuable mining and industrial districts of Upper Silesia. From Lithuania they have taken Vilna; from the Ukrainians, Upper Galicia. They have pushed their eastern frontier into Russia 200 kilometers beyond their own ethnographic limits; they are still at loggerheads with Czechoslovakia.

Our author, with a frankness that increases the value of his study a hundredfold, admits that of Poland's frontier 75 per cent is permanently menaced, 20 per cent insecure, and only 5 per cent safe. All this may have satisfied Poland—Count Skrzynski appears to regard the situation as inevitable—but will it permanently satisfy Germany and Russia? There, it would seem, lies the real danger, and we do not wonder that this experienced and cultured diplomatist—he is a former Minister for Foreign Affairs—is concerned about the future.

The sole remedy envisaged by Count Skrzynski is a large Polish army. If this must be accepted, then the outlook for Poland and for Europe is decidedly unfortunate. But is there no alternative? There is surely no justification for the assumption that there can never be any compromise with Germany, 'even should common sense dictate it," or to assume that an agreement with Russia regarding a division of the plains and marshes of the Sarmatian Plateau is impossible. It is just this lack of faith in mankind, this obsession that force is the Alpha and Omega of diplomaey, that is causing the nations of the Continent to sink ever more deeply into the quicksands of chaos and despair. If Poland is going to live in persistent conflict with her neighbors, there can only be one end to itwar, and a fourth partition. But if she can gain their consent to her independent existence, she may yet fill a useful and glorious purpose, in keeping with the greatest and noblest pages of her history. Count Skrzynski holds up the Treaty of Versailles as his political Bible, deeming it verbally inspired and textually inviolable. He should remember that its genesis is the Covenant of the League of Nations.

We have concentrated our attention on what we regard as the most important aspect of a notable book. Count Skrzynski, however, does not confine himself to the external problem. He gives us also a congested, but vivid picture of his country's internal difficulties. There is a graphic story of the tragedy of Poland, of her sons dragged off to fight simultaneously in three different armies for the satisfaction of remote ambitions in which they had no conceivable interest. They had been divided into three different systems, each kept in strict isolation from the others. And yet, says our author, they were drawn together by their common civilization, language, and literature. The more they were dragged apart, the more the sentiment of unity grew.

In a sympathetic perusal of this chapter, we cannot help wondering why it does not dawn upon the Poles that these self-same factors are applicable to the Germans they are seeking to assimilate in Upper Silesia and East Prussia, to the Lithuanians of Vilna, and the Ukrainians of Eastern Galicia. It is not difficult to argue around the question of the treatment of minorities. Count Skrzynski is quite correct when he demonstrates that these alien elements cannot be allowed to become a danger to the Polish State. He has hopes of a limited assimilation, and here it must be remarked that the materialization of those hopes will very largely depend upon the removal of any definite territorial injustices inflicted upon the neighboring states, and the treatment which the Poles themselves mete out to those different from themselves in race and religion.

It is obvious that you cannot retain 30 per cent of Germany's agricultural area, and expect Germany to be permanently content with a situation which deprives her of elbow room for her growing population, and forces her to import grain which she might, otherwise cultivate herself. Nor will Russia eternally tolerate a Polish frontier drawn 200 kilometers outside the Polish ethnographic limit. Within the State, again, measures will have to be taken to protect the Ukrainians of Upper Galicia, and the proposal of the Supreme Council, that they should be granted a full measure of autonomy under Polish sovereignty, has much to recommend it.

There remain, then, the Jews. Count Skrzynski treats with this problem in a most frank and admirable fashion. One-third of the Jewish population of the world lives in Poland. Jews control 70 per cent of Polish trade, and 50 per cent of its finance. In the last census 80 per cent of them described themselves, not only as Jews by religion, but Jews by nationality. Here, of course, we are again brought face to face with political Zionism, and the present and future of Polish governments are placed on the horns of a dilemma. If the Jews do not receive national equality, they will never become loyal citizens. If, on the other hand, they are granted such equality, they will dominate the administration, produce a Jewish intelligentsia dominated by a sentiment of Jewish nationalism, and hold the Polish and Christian populations more or less at their mercy.

In short, Poland would ultimately cease to be Polish. There would seem to be no definite solution at hand. Our author leaves the question shrouded in a fog of uncertainty. He tells us that the Jewish question in Poland can only be solved by the evolution and cultural progress of both nationalities, when blind instincts and emotions give place to mutual understanding—and even then no solution will be found on nationalist lines!
